NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS

Not less than 6 of a variety will be supplied at the dozen rate, nor less than 25 of a variety at the hundred rate, nor less than 250 of a variety at the thousand rate.

No charges for packing. We use wooden boxes, or other suitable materials.

After delivering to the forwarders, all goods are entirely at the risk of the purchaser, and if any loss occurs, the forwarders alone must be held responsible.

Customers desiring stock shipped C. O. D. must remit one-fourth of the amount of their purchase when ordering.

Please state whether goods are to be shipped by express, freight or mail.

Claims, if any, must be made promptly on receipt of goods, when they will be carefully examined, and, if just, all made satisfactory. Claims made after ten days from receipt of goods will not be entertained.

At the prices quoted, purchasers pay transportation charges.

I warrant all stock true to name, with the express understanding and agreement with the purchaser that, should any prove not true to name, I will return the money paid, or will replace with other stock; but it is mutually agreed between the purchaser and myself that I shall not under any circumstances be held responsible for a greater amount than the original price of the stock.

TERMS OF PAYMENT: To customers of established credit or whose responsibility is known to me, my terms are sixty days net. Others will please send cash with their orders, or three references to parties in the trade with whom they have had credit relations, and allow sufficient time to investigate same.

My reference: The Mountville National Bank, American Express Co., and our increasing business.

Protection in Winter for Hardy Perennials

Somewhere about the end of November, or early in December, it will be necessary to afford a slight protection for some of the less hardy plants in the border. Not all of them require it. Species such as Phlox, Peonies, Oriental Poppies and Iris stand the severest winters without any damage being done, but when the growth has been cut back by frost or died down in a natural way, the old stems should be removed and burned, and a covering of leaves or loose stable manure be given the sorts that are not able to stand extreme cold. It is well to give only a slight covering, for if they are covered too heavily the protection causes the plants to start into growth too early in the spring, with the result that they are crippled by late frosts. As the weather begins to moderate the covering should be removed, but only by degrees; this gives any new growth the plants may have made a chance to harden off gradually. After a few days it will generally be found safe to uncover them altogether, allowing them full sunshine. Some perennials are better protected by storing in frames or cellars for absolute safety.
